

Document 0094

[20094002]

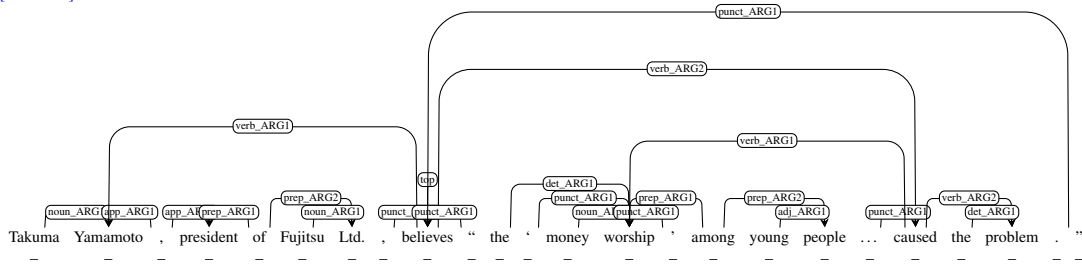

The Japanese industrial companies should know better .

[20094003]

They are barking up the wrong tree , because it is basically their fault they ca n't attract new employees .

[20094004]

Takuma Yamamoto , president of Fujitsu Ltd. , believes " the money worship " among young people ... caused the problem . "

[20094005]

He is just passing the buck to young people .

[20094006]

What 's wrong with asking for more money ?

[20094007]

Money is not everything , but it is necessary , and business is not volunteer work .

[20094008]

It is not unethical to choose a higher-salaried job .

[20094009]

Unfortunately , Japanese manufacturers have neither good working conditions nor good compensation packages .

[20094010]

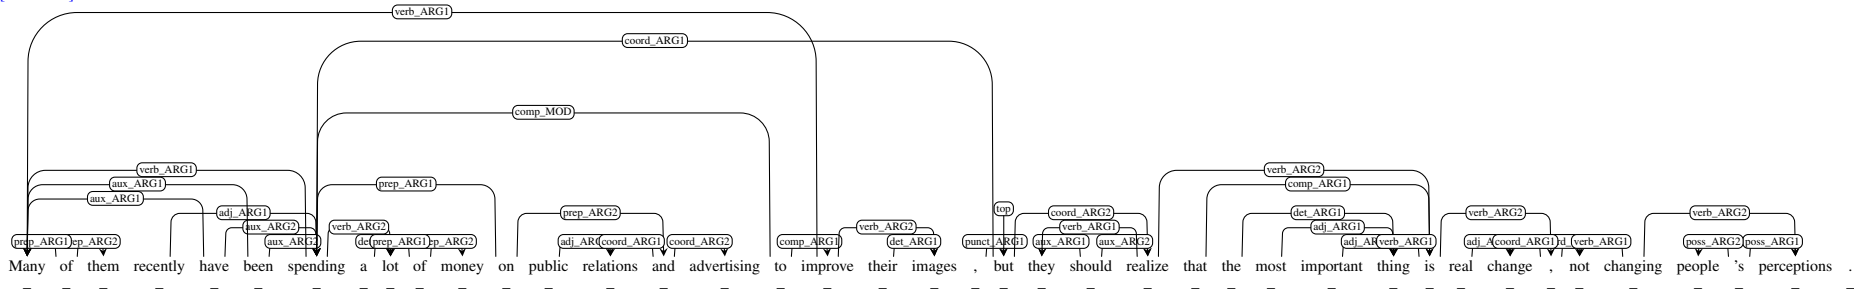

I get the impression that some Japanese managers believe working harder for less money is beautiful .

[20094011]

I visited a lot of major Japanese manufacturers , but I never felt I would want to be employed by any of them .

[20094012]

Many of them recently have been spending a lot of money on public relations and advertising to improve their images , but they should realize that the most important thing is real change , not changing people 's perceptions .

[20094013]

If the Japanese companies are seriously considering their survival , they could do at least three things to improve the situation : raise salaries higher than those of financial institutions ; improve working conditions (better offices and more vacations , for example) ; accept and hire more labor from outside Japan .

[20094014]

Hiroshi Asada