New Jersey's Paper Mill Playhouse produced this faithful revival of America's most influential musical, written by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein and first produced on Broadway in 1927.

[20976003]

Worth watching, although the music has lasted better than the plot or the humor.

[20976005]

Aidan Quinn, Brian Dennehy and Stockard Channing are excellent in this gripping tale of a reluctant witness in an organized crime prosecution.

[20976006]

It's set in New York, but it resonates with the terrible dynamics of the Latin American drug wars.

No doubt there is something to irk everyone in this AT&T-sponsored dramatization of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein's book about Watergate.

[20976009]

Personally, I'm irked by its combination of ponderousness and timidity, which adds up to an utter lack of drama.

Sunday, Oct. 29, 10-11 p.m. EST, on Showtime (repeated Nov. 2, 6, 11 and 15): "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

[20976013]

I promise you will stay awake through this intriguing documentary about the science of sleep.

[20976015]

Critical opinion is divided about the success of Benton's populist defiance of modernist art.

[20976016]

But no one could disagree that Ken Burns has made a fascinating film about this famous American painter.

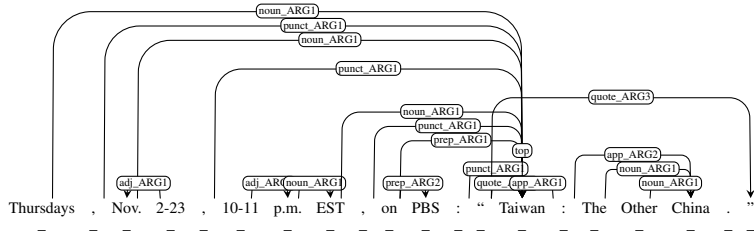

[20976017]

Thursday, Nov. 2, 9-10 p.m. EST, on A&E (repeated at 1 a.m. and on Nov. 5): "Third and Oak: The Pool Hall."

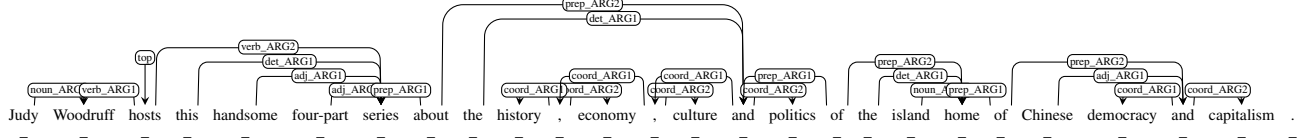

[20976019]

James Earl Jones and Mario Van Peebles carry out a bitter intergenerational dialogue between two black men.
