

Document 0450

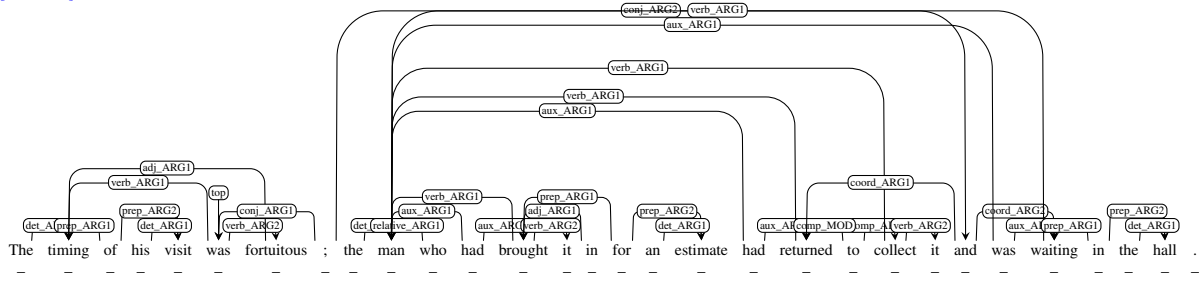

[20450001]

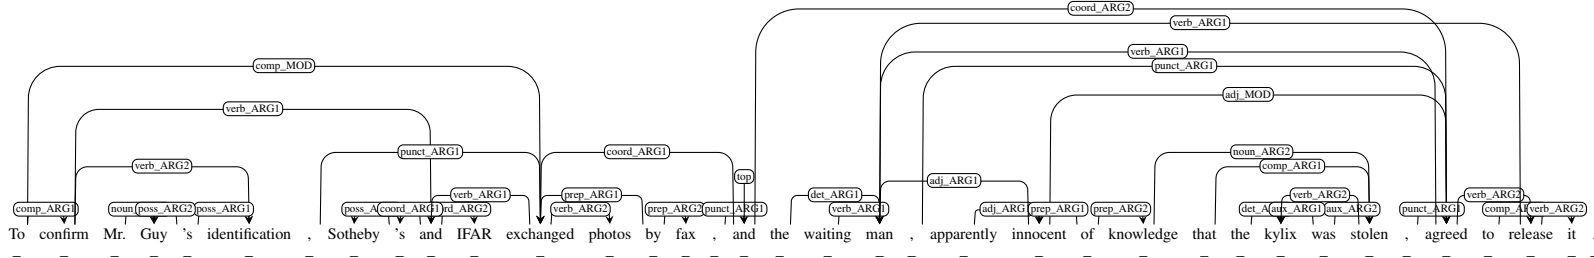

[20450002]

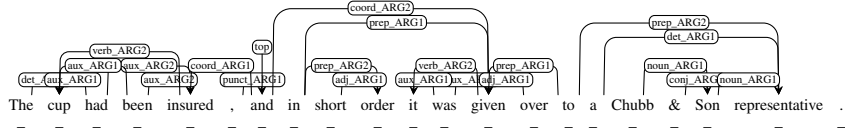

[20450003]

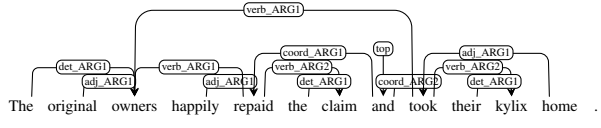

[20450004]

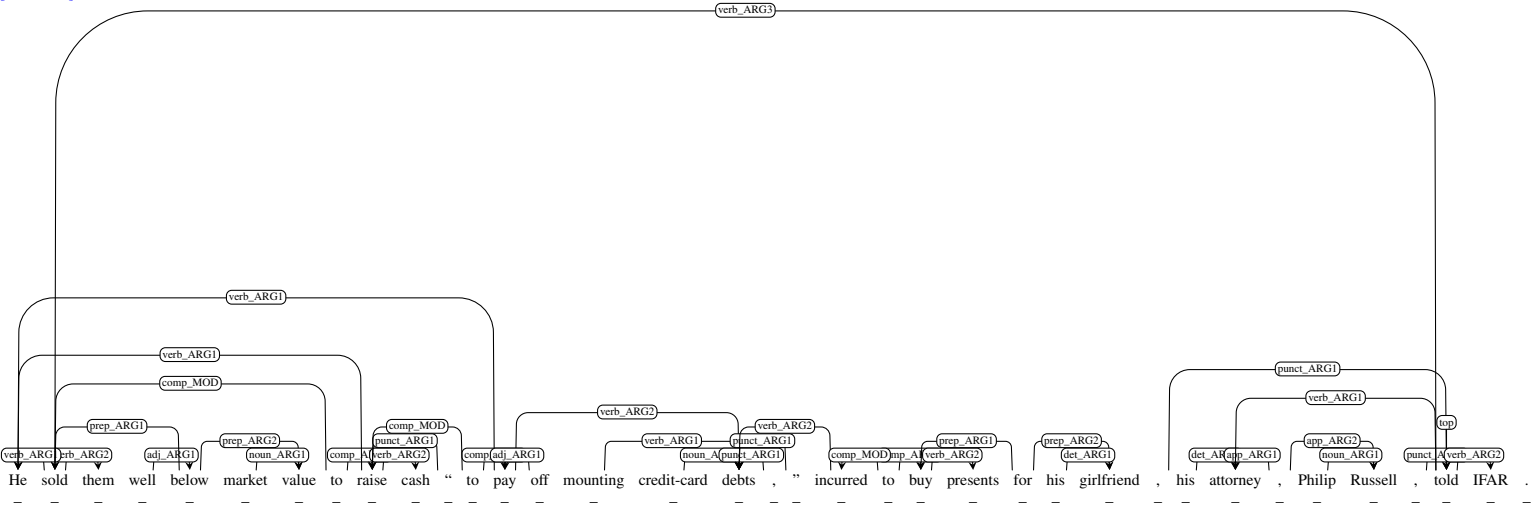

[20450005]

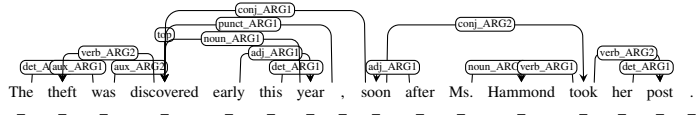

[20450006]

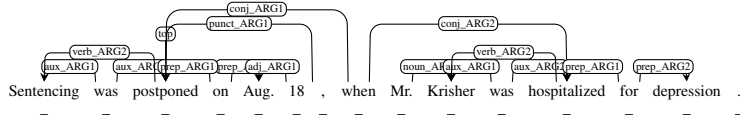

[20450008]

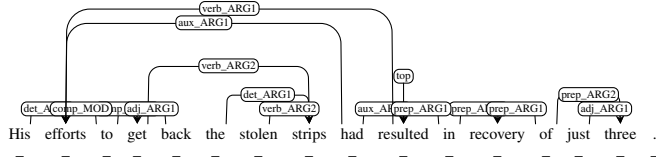

[20450010]

[20450011]

[20450012]

[20450013]

But on Oct. 6 , he had reason to celebrate .

[20450014]

Two days earlier , his attorney met in a Park Avenue law office with a cartoon dealer who expected to sell 44 of the most important stolen strips to Mr. Russell for $ 62,800 .

[20450015]

Instead , New York City police seized the stolen goods , and Mr. Krisher avoided jail .

[20450016]

He was sentenced to 500 hours of community service and restitution to the museum of $ 45,000 .

[20450017]

Authorities at London 's Heathrow Airport are investigating the disappearance of a Paul Gauguin watercolor , " Young Tahitian Woman in a Red Pareo , " that has two sketches on its verso (opposite) side .

[20450020]

Although Heathrow authorities have been watching a group of allegedly crooked baggage handlers for some time , the Gauguin may be " lost . "

[20450021]

Chief Inspector Peter Seacomb of the Criminal Investigation Department at the airport said , " It is not uncommon for property to be temporarily mislaid or misrouted . "

[20450022]

Officials at the University of Virginia Art Museum certainly would agree .

[20450023]

Their museum had purchased an Attic black-figured column krater and shipped it from London .

[20450024]

It was reported stolen in transit en route to Washington , D.C. , in February .

[20450025]

Months later , the Greek vase arrived in good condition at the museum in Charlottesville , having inexplicably traveled by a circuitous route through Nairobi .

[20450026]

Two Mexican college dropouts , not professional art thieves , have been arrested for a 1985 Christmas Eve burglary from the National Museum of Anthropology in Mexico City .

[20450027]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "About 140 Mayan, Aztec, Mixtec and Zapotec objects, including some of Mexico's best-known archaeological treasures, were taken."

The diagram shows a complex network of semantic relations (ARG1, ARG2, etc.) connecting the elements of the sentence, including the subject (objects), the modifier (including some of Mexico's best-known archaeological treasures), and the main verb (were taken).

[20450028]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "The government offered a reward for the return of the antiquities, but routine police work led to the recovery."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (The government), the main verb (offered), the object (a reward), and the condition (but routine police work led to the recovery).

[20450029]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "As it turned out, Carlos Perches Trevino and Ramon Sardina Garcia had hidden the haul in a closet in the Perches family's home for a year."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (Carlos Perches Trevino and Ramon Sardina Garcia), the main verb (had hidden), the object (the haul), and the location (in a closet in the Perches family's home).

[20450030]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "Then they took the art to Acapulco and began to trade some of it for cocaine."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (they), the main verb (took), the object (the art), and the location (Acapulco).

[20450031]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "Information from an arrested drug trafficker led to the two men and the recovery of almost all the stolen art."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (Information from an arrested drug trafficker), the main verb (led to), and the object (the two men and the recovery of almost all the stolen art).

[20450032]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "Among other happy news bulletins from the German Democratic Republic, the Leipzig Museum of Fine Arts announced that it has recovered 'Cemetery in the Snow,' a painting by the German Romantic painter Caspar David Friedrich."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (the Leipzig Museum of Fine Arts), the main verb (announced), and the object (that it has recovered 'Cemetery in the Snow,' a painting by the German Romantic painter Caspar David Friedrich).

[20450033]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "The artist's melancholy subjects bring high prices on the world market, and the U.S. State Department notified IFAR of the theft in February 1988."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (The artist's melancholy subjects), the main verb (bring), and the object (high prices on the world market).

[20450034]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "According to a source at the East Europe desk, two previously convicted felons were charged, tried, convicted and sentenced to prison terms of four and 12 years."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (two previously convicted felons), the main verb (were charged, tried, convicted and sentenced), and the object (to prison terms of four and 12 years).

[20450035]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "The precious canvas, cut from its frame at the time of the theft, was found in nearby Jena, hidden in the upholstery of an easy chair in the home of the girlfriend of one of the thieves."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (The precious canvas), the main verb (was found), and the location (in nearby Jena, hidden in the upholstery of an easy chair in the home of the girlfriend of one of the thieves).

[20450036]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "No charges were brought against her."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (No charges), the main verb (were brought), and the object (against her).

[20450037]

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "Trompe l'oeil painting is meant to fool the eye, but Robert Lawrence Trotter, 35, of Kennett Square, Pa., took his fooling seriously."

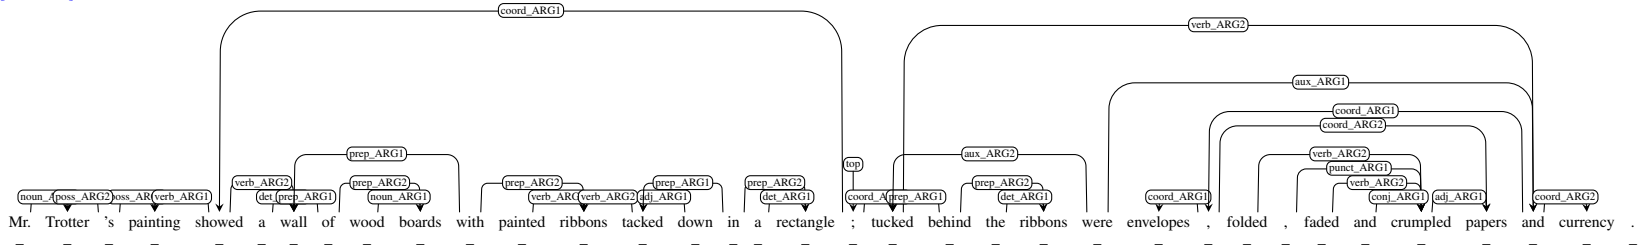

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (Trompe l'oeil painting), the main verb (is meant to fool), and the object (the eye).

[20450038]

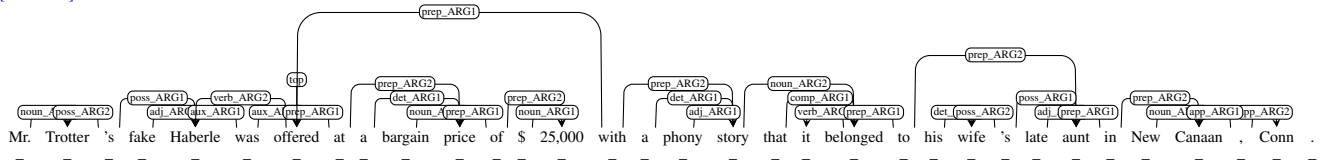

Diagram illustrating the semantic structure of the sentence: "He painted one himself in the style of John Haberle and sold it as a 19th-century original to antique dealers in Woodbridge, Conn."

The diagram shows the semantic structure of the sentence, including the subject (He), the main verb (painted), and the object (one himself in the style of John Haberle).

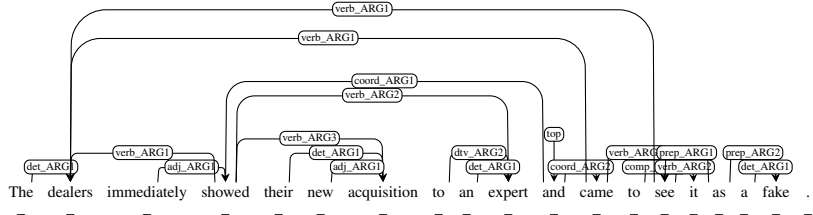

[20450039]

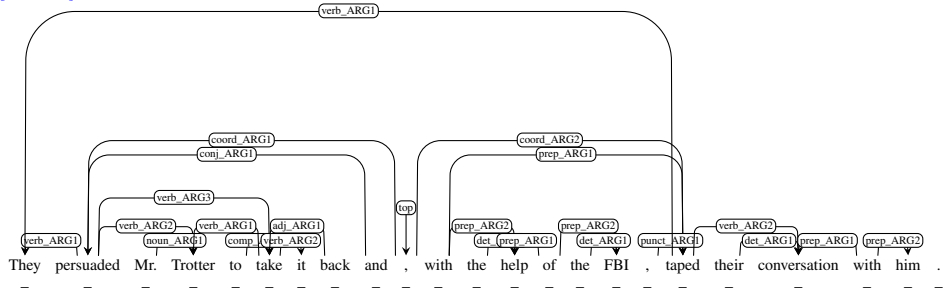

[20450040]

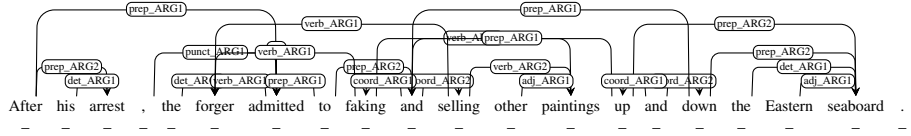

[20450041]

[20450042]

[20450043]

[20450044]

