

Document 0502

20502001

American Airlines will expand its trans-Atlantic service 30 % beginning next year with six new daily flights between the U.S. and Europe , officials announced yesterday .

[20502002]

American, a unit of AMR Corp., is the nation's largest airline.

Diagram illustrating the syntactic structure of the sentence "American, a unit of AMR Corp., is the nation's largest airline." The structure shows the main clause "is the nation's largest airline" and the relative clause "a unit of AMR Corp." connected by a comma. The main clause is headed by the verb "is" (verb ARG1). The relative clause is headed by the noun "unit" (noun ARG1). The main clause is further divided into the subject "American" (noun ARG1) and the predicate "the nation's largest airline" (noun ARG2). The relative clause is further divided into the head "unit" (noun ARG1) and the modifier "of AMR Corp." (noun ARG2).

[20502003]

The new nonstop flights, starting next May, will include Chicago-Warsaw, Chicago-Helsinki, Miami-Madrid, Dallas-Barcelona, a second daily Chicago-Paris flight and a second daily Chicago-Manchester flight, the officials said.

[20502004]

Chicago has the largest population of citizens of Polish heritage in any city outside Poland .

[20502005]

With the new service, American will fly 161 flights a week to 17 European cities.

[20502006]

The additions solidify American's position as the third-largest U.S. transatlantic carrier, behind PanAm Corp.'s Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines