[22112001]

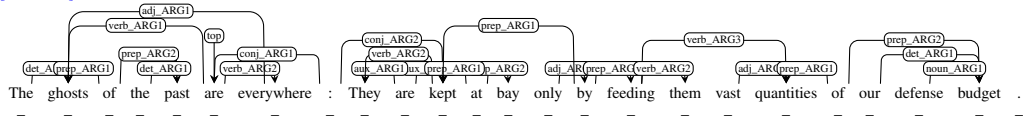

The Pentagon is a haunted house .

[22112002]

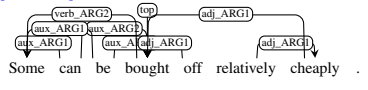

Living there for six years was really scary .

[22112003]

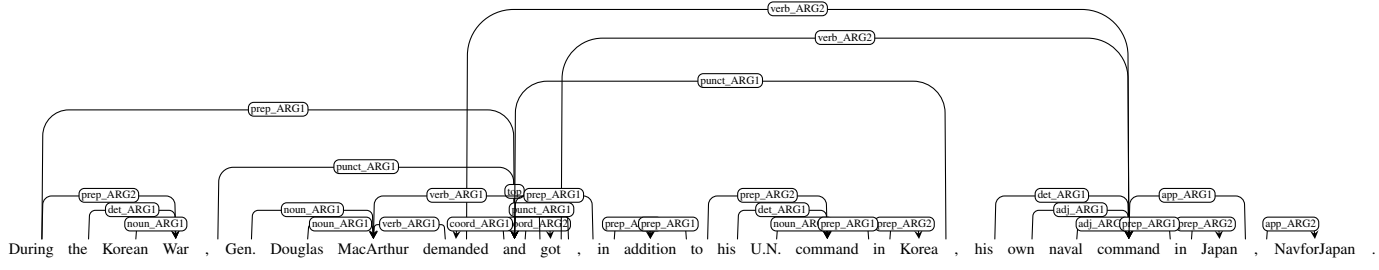

The ghosts of the past are everywhere : They are kept at bay only by feeding them vast quantities of our defense budget .

[22112004]

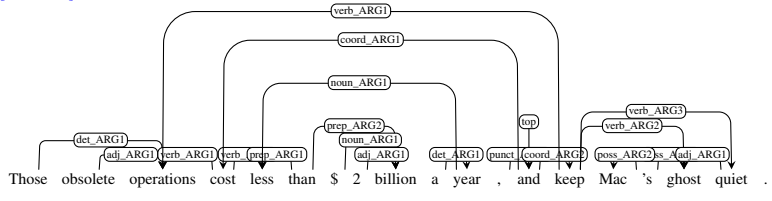

Some can be bought off relatively cheaply .

[22112005]

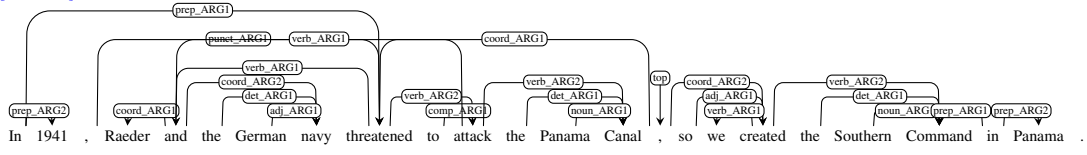

During the Korean War , Gen. Douglas MacArthur demanded and got , in addition to his U.N. command in Korea , his own naval command in Japan , NavforJapan .

[22112006]

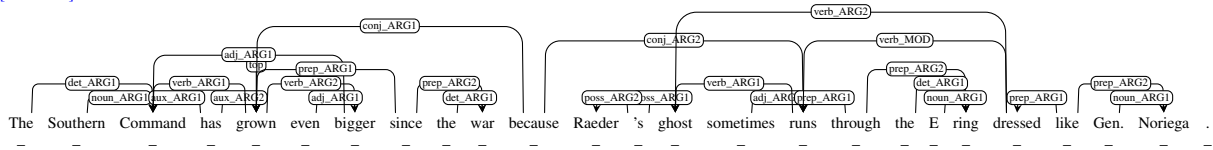

Those obsolete operations cost less than $ 2 billion a year , and keep Mac 's ghost quiet .

[22112008]

In 1941 , Raeder and the German navy threatened to attack the Panama Canal , so we created the Southern Command in Panama .

[22112009]

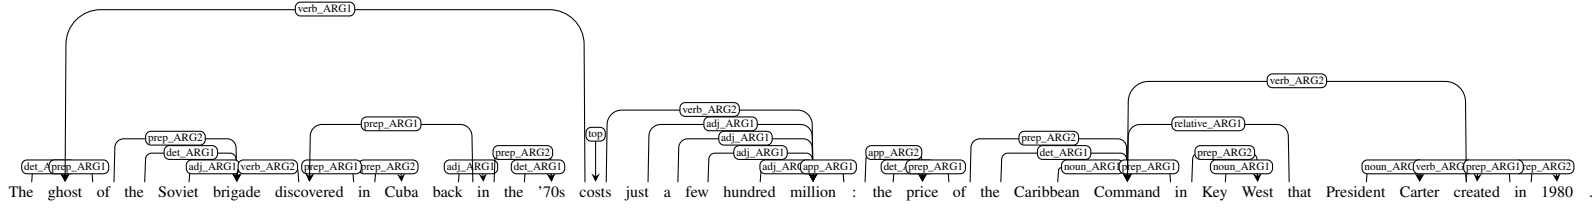

The Southern Command has grown even bigger since the war because Raeder 's ghost sometimes runs through the E ring dressed like Gen. Noriega .

[22112011]

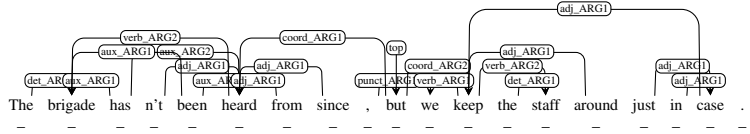

So far no one has .

[22112012]

The ghost of the Soviet brigade discovered in Cuba back in the '70s costs just a few hundred million : the price of the Caribbean Command in Key West that President Carter created in 1980 .

[22112013]

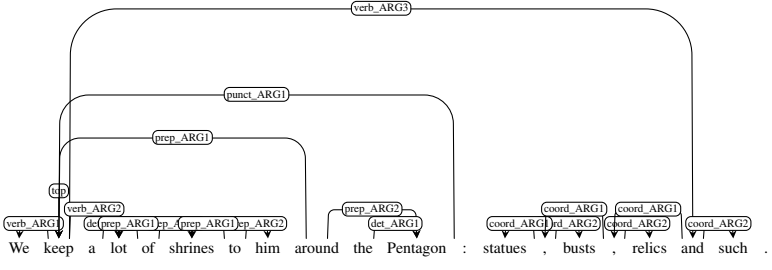

The brigade has n't been heard from since , but we keep the staff around just in case .

[22112014]

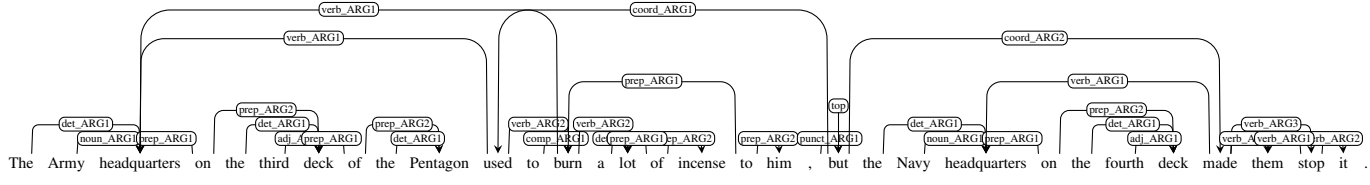

George Marshall 's ghost is much more difficult to keep happy .

[22112015]

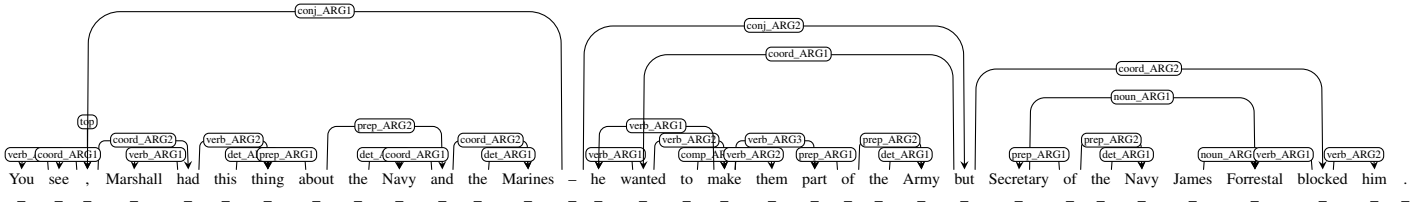

We keep a lot of shrines to him around the Pentagon : statues , busts , relics and such .

[22112016]

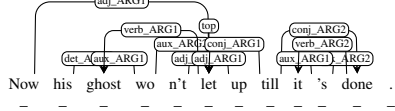

The Army headquarters on the third deck of the Pentagon used to burn a lot of incense to him , but the Navy headquarters on the fourth deck made them stop it .

On the other hand, Mr. Cheney retained all those new land forces.

Marshall 's ghost is satisfied for now , but he 'll be back .

Figure 1 illustrates a dependency parse tree for the sentence: "What with Halloween coming and bigger defense cuts looming, more and more Pentagon bureaucrats are crawling under their desks." The tree structure shows the hierarchical organization of the sentence, with nodes representing grammatical units and edges representing dependencies. The root node is 'S', which branches into 'NP' and 'VP'. 'NP' branches into 'What' and 'with'. 'VP' branches into 'Halloween coming and bigger' and 'defense cuts looming'. 'Halloween coming and bigger' branches into 'Halloween coming' and 'and bigger'. 'defense cuts looming' branches into 'defense cuts' and 'looming'. 'more and more' branches into 'more' and 'more'. 'Pentagon bureaucrats are crawling under their desks' branches into 'Pentagon bureaucrats', 'are', 'crawling', 'under', 'their', and 'desks'. The diagram shows the hierarchical structure of the sentence with nodes and edges representing grammatical dependencies.

Then the whole thing will start to collapse . just as it did in the 1970s . and the ghosts and baneships will be howling through the place turning people 's hair white .

Mr. Lehman, a Reagan Navy secretary, is a managing director of PaineWebber .
